BIRTHDAY BEACH PARTY

Mrs. William Engle gave a birthday party on Wednesday at the beach home of Dr. and Mrs. William Osmers in celebration of the first birthday anniversary of little Miss Alma Engle. Invitations issued to between 30 and 40 children and 20 mothers and despite the stormy weather the responses were large.

In the beach home there was an air of joy and festivity which dispelled all gloom of the bad weather with out. There were games for the little folk and delicious ice cream and cake were served.

Maui Woman's Club

The next meeting of the Maui Woman's Club will be held at the Territorial Building on Monday afternoon February 6th, at 2:30. The Humane Department, of which Mrs. Ben Williams is chairman, is in charge of the program of the day.

A chief feature of interest at the same session will be a short address by Mrs. Mabel Farrington Hahn, director of Near East Relief work, who is visiting the Islands at this time in the interests of the rehabilitation of the Christian peoples of Asia Minor. Her subject will be "Personal Experiences in Armenia."

The hostesses for the afternoon are Mrs. Eugene Murphy, Mrs. J. J. Correll and Mrs. J. A. Gibb.

In view of the winter interest attaching to the subject to be dealt with it has been decided to make the occasion a public meeting without charge that all who wish may attend. The business for members will convene at 2:30, the open meeting for the public at 3:00.

Special music by the Music Department.

Services of Expert

Printer Secured to Maui Publishing Co.

With a view of still further bettering the service which it is prepared to render the Maui business community and the public generally, Maui Publishing Company has secured the services as superintendent of its mechanical department of J. M. Cunningham, who resigned as superintendent of the printing plant of the Paradise of the Pacific in Honolulu to come here. His association with that establishment, producer of one of the most beautiful and artistic magazines published and one of the foremost producers of high class commercial printing in Honolulu, is a recommendation in itself and the company feels that it is fortunate in adding him to its staff.

Cunningham is not a stranger on Maui for he was here ten years ago. He first came to the Islands to The Paradise of the Pacific in 1910. When Val Stevenson came to Maui News, Cunningham came with him and was able to do wonders even with the comparatively small and incomplete plant of that time. With the much enlarged and improved plant, the new machinery and equipment that has been purchased in the past year and a half he has opportunities now that he did not enjoy then. He was here in the years 1912 and 1913.

Leaving Maui, Cunningham returned to the Paradise of the Pacific company where he remained until 1915 when he went to the mainland where he remained until 1917. He was then in Portland and was prevailed upon to return to the Honolulu Company and had been with it for the past four years. While on the mainland he was for a time in Bisbee, Arizona as superintendent of the plant of the Bisbee Daily Review, one of the papers that the editor of Maui News had previously edited, before coming to the Islands.

Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham came back to Maui last week and have leased the Robinson property on High street that was recently occupied by the family of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Field. He took up his work in the Maui Publishing Company plant on February 1.

Capital Stock Will Be Increased Some

At the recent meeting of the stockholders of the Maui Securities Company Ltd. the officers and board of directors were re-elected, to wit: Geo. Freeland, President, Geo. Webb, Vice-president, J. A. Templeton, J. Meinecke, J. T. Fantom, J. H. Kunewa, F. A. Lufkin and M. G. Paschoal, Directors. The company's statement of resources and liabilities disclosed a most prosperous condition, the securities well balanced, and the stockholders assured of a conservative return for the future. All organization and other expense items have been completely written off, and the first dividend on both the common and preferred stocks has been paid. The stockholders also decided to increase the capital stock slightly, although no aggressive campaign for its sale will be instituted.

Tuppence Once Bought Book That Since Has Millions of Readers

(Contributed)

Who would buy a $1.50 book for 2 cents? And the book one of the great classics of the Nineteenth Century? Anyone could who happened to be in London some years ago.

It is the old story of a world-famous piece of literature starting out as a publisher's failure. The publisher is a Mr. Quaritch, the author is the inconspicuous Edward Fitzgerald, and the book is a translation of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. The work that since has gone through more than a hundred editions, was first printed privately and its 200 copies were a drug on the market. The author paid the printer's bill and then gave the copies back to the printer besides. And the printer took the beautiful little volumes and spread them on a stand in front of his shop, marking them "Help yourself. 1 penny."

Daniel Gabriel Rosetti went down that street and took a copy for one penny. On another day Swinburne strolled by and risked a penny on the tray. Sir Richard Burton saw them and decided that a six shilling book might be worth the two cents, and stuck one in his pocket.

Today there are editions of this work in sumptuous bindings, the last word in the publisher's art, that can be had for the modest price of $20.00. And there have been probably five million copies of the book sold.

Yet the author of the now-famous translation was with difficulty persuaded to put his name to it at all. Fitzgerald had many of the oddities in his make-up that are supposed to go with genius. One day, when he was a student at Cambridge, his mother drove up in her coach and four and asked him to come down. Instead of presenting himself, he sent down the information that his only pair of shoes were at the cobbler's. In a later day he was a common figure on the streets near his country home, padding along in slippers and with a handkerchief tied over his hat!

He knew that he came from an eccentric family. "We are all mad," he wrote a friend. And yet he came from a high-born stock. His mother was a scion of the ducal house of Leinster, being a Geraldine of that branch which descends from the second son of the first Earl of Kildare. He married the daughter of a Quaker poet, and then quite cheerfully agreed to a separation realizing that it was asking too much of any woman to put up with his lazy, leisurely ways.

This oddity did not take the trouble to see his brother three miles away for a period of a dozen years. He told Thackeray not to invite him to his house, "as he did not intend to go," and Thackeray was one of his best friends. He ate radishes from his garden at breakfast, because "it put the flavor of mother earth into the day's thought!"

He made admirable translations of Aeschylus and put in long passages that the Greek poet ought to have said! He translated Spanish and Persian for the amusement it gave him. His chief delight was a voyage in his private yacht, manned by two sailors, the passengers being three or four literary friends, the supplies a large English meat pie, some bottles of wine, and plenty of classics. "A book of verses underneath the bough, a jug of wine, a loaf of bread and Thou!"

And yet this sweet souled loafer, to his own surprise and to the amazement of his friends, turned off as a bit of amusement a work that will be classic as long as there is an English speech.

This marvellous Rubaiyat of Omar the Tentmaker, in the dress that Fitzgerald gave it, will be sung as a "Cycle of Song" at the Makawao Community House on the evening of next Friday, the tenth of the month.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2—(Associated Press)—Bolshevik press reports place the population of Soviet Russia at 18,000,000 less than the pre-war estimates. The 1921 population is given at 130,706,000, according to the department of commerce in Washington.
